

STAFFING AS A CAREER

www.elwoodcareers.com

Dream of working for a large corporation? What about a small family business? Want to know what it's like to work in the manufacturing industry? Curious how things differ in a service organization? Good news! You will have the opportunity to experience all of the above—and more—during your staffing industry career. The staffing industry touches every single part of domestic business and much of foreign enterprise, affording you the opportunity to work with clients in your local area and even across the globe.

The staffing industry provides the essential elements of economic stability and success: jobs, flexibility, choice, and training. During the course of a year, nearly 16 million Americans find employment through a staffing firm, and approximately 75% of those employees work at least 40 hours a week. And businesses achieve increased flexibility, speed, and access to talent.

If you're not yet convinced a career in the staffing, recruiting, and workforce solutions industry is in your future, here are a few more great reasons from the American Staffing Association!

IT'S A GREAT TIME TO LAUNCH A CAREER IN STAFFING

Whether you're currently in college or you're looking to make a career change, staffing and recruiting companies offer numerous diverse professional employment opportunities for talented individuals across the experience spectrum—at corporate headquarters and branch offices throughout the U.S.

THE INDUSTRY NEEDS PROFESSIONALS IN A VARIETY OF AREAS

Think of all the different skill sets needed to run a successful business. Staffing and recruiting companies need sales professionals, recruiters, accountants, lawyers, information technology experts, marketing and communications executives, human resources specialists, and more.

THE STAFFING AND RECRUITING INDUSTRY IS GROWING

The $150 billion U.S. staffing and recruiting industry continues to grow. Many staffing and recruiting companies are looking to hire new and seasoned professionals for rewarding, diverse, and fast-paced careers in the workforce solutions industry.
